THE SUFFOLK JOURNAL
Vol. 1-33, 1936-1978

Every effort has been made to assemble a complete run of Suffolk University's student newspaper. Irregularities in numbering, however, make it difficult to determine whether or not certain volumes are complete. Probably published but missing are the following issues:

- Vol. 4, no. 1, 3-5, 1946-47?
- Vol. 7, no. 11, March or April 1950.
- Vol. 11, no. 1-4, 1953.
- Vol. 13, no. 1, October? 1956.
- Vol. 27, no. 10-11, March or April 1972.

Possibly published, but missing, are concluding numbers of vol. 5, 1948-49 and vol. 17, 1961, and vol. 23, no. 6, February or March 1968.

Briefly the Suffolk Journal changed its title to the Suffolk Rambler (vol. 8, no. 2-10, September 1950-May 1951) but reverted to its traditional title in the following year.

The only issue apparently published of Ravin' Magazine (vol. 1, no. 1, October 1972) is included in the file, because the issue is wholly devoted to a subject appearing in the Journal at that time.

Gratitude is expressed to the University Archives and to D. Bradley Sullivan, Dean of Students, for their assistance in assembling as complete a file of the newspaper as possible.

Grad. Work Popular Among Attorneys

Twenty-Six Men Awarded LL. M. Degree in June

The Graduate Course in Suffolk Law School will re-open on Monday evening, September 28, just one week following the opening of the undergraduate law classes. Graduates holding the degree of LL. B. are eligible to register, provided such candidates satisfy the current educational requirements for admission to the Law School. Students are permitted to spread their work for the LL. M. over a two-year period, if they so desire. It is also permissible for students to register for single courses.

The curriculum presented for this year is expected to prove attractive to a large number of practicing attorneys in Greater Boston who are anxious to grow intellectually and professionally.

Prof. W. Howard Claflin, A. B., A. M., Ph. D., will give the course in "English Constitutional History." This course embraces the political history of England from the Germanic invasions to the fifteenth century, tracing the absorbing story of the development of democratic theory and the outgrowth of the age-old struggle between the commons and the landed aristocracy. The evolution of legal safeguards, including the well-known great charters of liberty, will be accorded careful consideration as Dr. Claflin traces the development of the parliamentary system in modern England.

A comprehensive course in "Municipal Government" will be given by Judge Edward T. Simmons, of the District Court of Middlesex. This study will present a survey of American city governments especially designed for those who are interested in the administration of municipal affairs and for those urban residents who desire to acquire a clear picture of the workings of city governments. Class discussion will center about problems concerning elections, law enforcement, governmental experimentation, and the relationships of cities to other units of the whole government. The work will be intensive and extensive, all problems being considered from many angles. The problem of the financial management of municipalities will come in for the particular study which it merits in view of the economic situation in general, although the technical aspects of municipal financing, the fixing of tax rates and the control of municipal expenditures through a budget system, will be made the special province of the course to be given on "Municipal Finance" under the direction of Mr. Charles J. Fox, A. B., City Auditor of Boston.

John N. O'Donohue, LL. B., will give the course on "Taxation." Roger A. Strickfield, B. S., LL. B., will handle the important subject of "Admiralty." "Legal Research" will be presented by a lecturer from the research staff of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. Robert C. Elliott, B. S., LL. B., will give the course on "Public Making," explaining the customs governing the preparation of briefs, especially for the higher

GLEASON L. ARCHER, LL.D.
Founder of Suffolk Law School

Through The Years

By ALVEN A. BEE

On the Occasion of the Thirtieth Anniversary of Suffolk Law School.

*A dream of yesterday has grown to be
Today's proud monument in learning's name;
A vision that the founder dared to see
Now stands concrete, deserving of acclaim.
The Suffolk Law School, setting splendid pace
Has, in the educational world, won place.*

*For thirty years, has Suffolk's young doors wide
To eager youth in search of legal lore;
For thirty years, with high ideals and pride
The school has flourished daily more and more.
This anniversary marks a wondrous day
When students, old and new, then tribute pay.*

*The men who studied here have traveled far
Too, and the heights that mean a world success.
They set their course by Suffolk's shining star,
Of noble standards, Suffolk knows no less.
May coming years make brighter Suffolk's name
As its Alumni club to halls of Fame!*

Law School Passes 30th Milestone

Students and Alumni Plan Observance

Today Suffolk men are observing the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Law School. This evening, at 7:30, grads from 1910 to 1936 will join in a special convocation. Superior Court Justice Frank J. Donahue, Suffolk '21, will deliver the address of the evening. When Secretary of the Commonwealth in 1914, Judge Donahue witnessed the signing of our charter.

The time, 7:30, has an especial significance. At exactly that moment, on September 19, 1906, Gleason L. Archer, the youthful founder, met nine prospective students in the first lecture ever given under the auspices of this now famous institution. The scene, the living room of the Archer home in Roxbury, will be reproduced on the stage this evening. The same identical desk used on that occasion will be among the "props." Gleason L. Archer, Jr., twenty-year-old son, looking very much as his father did three decades ago, will take the part of the lecturer. Nine Suffolk students will fill the roles of the student body of '06.

Immediately after this brief historical sketch will come a varied program in which prominent Suffolk graduates will participate. Music will be furnished by Leo Tobin's orchestra. For himself being a popular and active member of Suffolk's graduate list, Bruno J. Particelli, president of the Alumni Association, will be master of ceremonies.

There will be addresses by Joseph J. Twitcheil, Esq., chairman of the celebration committee, by Dean Gleason L. Archer, and by Professors A. Chesley York, William H. Henchey, Thomas F. Duffy, and Thomas J. Finnegan.

A business meeting will follow at which plans will be made for the biggest and best banquet ever. November has been designated, sometime prior to Thanksgiving, for this Thirtieth Celebration Banquet.

With the resumption of classes in the Law School, student committees will shortly be working on plans for student observances throughout the anniversary year. Coming issues of the Journal will carry the complete stories of all events.

The Alumni Committee in charge of the plans for the anniversary celebration will make a report this evening. The committee is as follows: Joseph J. Twitcheil, chairman, Carl F. Diemer, Archie Gillis, James G. Morris, Judge Donahue, Edward D. Sharkey, Percy D. Jordan, Bernard J. Killian, Leo Wyman, John J. McDonough, Walter V. McCarthy, James F. Harrington, James A. Doyle, William J. McSweeney, Allen M. Cleveland, Hiram J. Archer, Joseph A. Parks, James E. Busley, James H. Brennan, Fred Gillespie, and Thomas J. Finnegan.

The Alumni officers held a special meeting on the evening of September 10th at the Club House to arrange the details for the Convocation.

SUFFOLK COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS ENTERS ITS THIRD YEAR

Record Registration Anticipated

New Courses Offered

Everything is in readiness for the beginning of classes in the Suffolk College of Liberal Arts on Monday, September 14. Advance registrations have been considerably larger than were those of a year ago. There will be a capacity enrollment in all classes.

President Edwin L. Vetter has just again headed the faculty, his special help being "American Cultural History," Mark V. Crowley, A.B., LL.B., will teach "National Government and Political Parties." The course will, he hopes, prove all the more interesting this year in view of the tremendous wave of popular opinion now sweeping the country as the most important election in years approaches.

Another timely course, in the light of the present international situation is that he gives, Mr. Wilfred F. Duffley, A.M., Ed.M., in the "History of American Foreign Policy." Already many students have expressed their intention of taking this subject among their electives.

A newcomer to the faculty, but a man who is well known in the teaching profession, particularly in the scientific branches, is Frank V. Gordon, B.S. His subject will be "Methods of Teaching Physics." His lectures will prove highly profitable to all who are prospective or active instructors of physics in high schools and colleges. This subject will be offered in alternate years.

A course in "Current Social Problems" will be presented as an elective by Walter V. McCarthy, LL.M., Commissioner McCarthy is at present the Supervisor of Public Welfare for the Commonwealth. His many years in municipal welfare work here in Boston and his valuable experience as a State official have given him an excellent background for the human interest study of instruction which is so well received by college classes.

In the field of English, courses will be given by Francis J. O'Connor, A.M., and Thomas W. Shuman, A.M. Professor O'Connor will handle the composition work, while his colleague will lecture on literature.

The greatly enriched curriculum of this year includes many inviting courses besides the above. All are in the hands of men recognized for their scholarship and teaching ability. An embarrassment of riches awaits the registrants at the opening of classes on work from Monday.

The mathematics courses which were to have been given by Dr. Sebastian D. Littauer will not be offered this year. Dr. Littauer will return to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, for his second consecutive year of instructorship there in the mathematics department. It is a source of genuine regret for Suffolk that Dr. Littauer will not be with us as we had anticipated, but our loss is the Navy's gain.

In entering in its third year, Suffolk College of Liberal Arts enjoys the friendship of an increasing number of friends who have come to know of its unique and efficient service to the community. As the first evening college of liberal arts in this section of the country with power to grant master's degrees, Suffolk's L. A. was from the first regarded as an interesting experiment in adult higher education. The rapid growth of the college through 1931, 1932, and 1933 is significantly indicative that the college has met and is meeting a vital educational need in Greater Boston. The consistent enrichment and multiplication of the courses offered have elicited the favorable attention and commendation of educators everywhere in the East.

The College has been fortunate, indeed, in the culture and co-operative spirit of its student body. It has been no less fortunate in its choice of instructors. Its leadership has been both conservative and progressive. Therefore have clearly been proven that the new College has the essentials for success.

A vital element in the present status of the institution is the prestige which has accrued to it from the public service and the active participation of its president, Dr. Gleason L. Archer, from the position of founder of an evening law school little known in Boston a quarter century ago, has become one of the recognized leaders of public opinion in the United States today. His radio broadcasts of recent date were enjoyed by the entire nation. He brought the principles of the common law to listeners in more than a million homes. His books on law and history have been studied by many thousands. His interest in public affairs is known to all here in Massachusetts and to many more in other parts of the East. At the height of his career, he is the recipient of public commendation, and Suffolk is naturally benefiting from the esteem in which her founder is generally held.

Students returning to resume their work within the next fortnight will find that details of registration and of program-making have been worked out to the ultimate by Miss Carolla A. Bryant, executive secretary and registrar, and her efficient office staff during the so-called "vacation" months. Everything is in order for the best year ever. "Everything" includes even the examination books and the final affectionate tending of the goldfish on the mantel in the College library. Incidentally, the Journal has learned that this school now offers an opportunity for graduate work in "Ichthyology."

Suffolk Statesmen

Suffolk Law School might well form an Ex-Mayors' Club among its students. Ex-Mayor Roy K. Patch of Beverly would be the ranking member of the club for he is now a Senior. Incidentally, Ex-Mayor Patch has made a remarkable record in the school. His work for three years averages over 90%. Mr. Patch is forty-five years old. He graduated from Beverly High School in 1908 and later attended the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Ex-Mayor Michael C. O'Neil of Everett is another distinguished member of this group. He will be a Junior this year. His record as a student has been well up toward 90% for the first two years. He is forty-eight years old, a graduate of English High School in 1908 and of Harvard University with a degree of B.S. in 1912.

One who might almost be classed as Mayor is Thomas F. Gibson, President of the Council of the City of Cambridge, who received his degree from Suffolk in June 1936. Mr. Gibson is thirty-two years old and a graduate from Cambridge High and Latin School in the class of '22.

J. Russell Bohan, City Treasurer of Gloucester will be entitled to join ranks with the Mayors. He received an LL.B. degree from Suffolk, 1936. He was born in Gloucester, May 1, 1891 and graduated from Gloucester High School in June 1918.

Thomas F. Buckley, State Auditor of the Commonwealth, who received his degree in June, 1936, was deservedly popular while an undergraduate in Suffolk. His record as a public official and campaign orator has won for him great prominence in Massachusetts. He was born in Abington, September 5, 1897 and graduated from Abington High School in 1915.

Briefs and Grants

Richard D. Grant, "Book Grant" of radio fame and former Secretary to Governor Curley, is now launched upon a successful career as a law student at Suffolk. He registered last January and worked with great zeal, making an average for the second semester of 89.13. Mr. Grant is thirty-seven years old and a graduate of English High School in the class of 1917.

"Book" Washburn is to become a podagist. Long noted for the brilliant nature of his speeches in the Massachusetts Legislature and in recent years for his pungent comments as a newspaper columnist on discussion of public events, "Book" Washburn is certain to prove one of the most popular members of the faculty of Suffolk College of Journalism. He will teach "The Syndicated Column." It is interesting to note that two or four years ago when Suffolk School was in the midst of an exciting legislative conflict for degree-granting power, Robert M. Washburn, then a popular member of the House of Representatives, came to the aid of the youthful institution with a brilliant speech that did much to carry the Suffolk Law School charter to victory in the legislature. Since that time he has been a friend of the institution and of Gleason L. Archer. His appointment to the faculty of Suffolk's newest department is, therefore, of more than ordinary significance.

Owing to the fact that Dean Archer's duties are greatly increased by the growth of Suffolk College of Liberal Arts and Suffolk College of Journalism, he has been obliged to relinquish the subject of Torts for the coming year. Professor Thomas J. Finnegan has been assigned to the course in addition to his regular subjects.

George E. McGuinnis, assistant District Attorney of Suffolk County, is being congratulated by his friends these days because of a new honor that has come to him. The assistant D. A. enrolled last fall for the Master of Laws course at Suffolk Law School and despite his strenuous daily program as a general office fighter carried on to a successful climax on June 10th when he received the coveted parchment giving him the right to add LL. M. to three other degrees already possessed by him. Mr. McGuinnis won his LL. B. from Suffolk in 1929. He also holds a B.B. A. degree from Boston University and a B. A. O. degree from Staley College of the Spoken Word.

FACULTY APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED IN SUFFOLK COLLEGE OF JOURNALISM

Notable Selections Made

Instructors Prominent In Field

Suffolk's new College of Journalism will welcome its first entering class on Monday evening, the 25th. Miss Carolella A. Bryant reports that registrations have been coming in daily throughout the summer. Large and existing groups of newspaper workers and prospective newspaper workers will comprise the charter classes in the three-year and five-year courses for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Journalism.

Announcements have been appearing in the daily press for some time back concerning faculty selection for the new College. The College authorities have sought to obtain the services of eminent men and women from the field of journalism, and the enthusiasm with which these outstanding people have entered into the new educational venture has been a source of great encouragement to those in charge.

The chairman of the advertisement for the new institution is George W. Adams, president of the Massachusetts Press Association. Others serving on the committee are Walter H. Allen, publisher of the Brookline Chronicle; Garfield E. Campbell, managing editor of the Wakefield Daily Item; Howell Cushman, radio news commentator on the Boston Herald; Charles E. Fairbanks, publisher of the South Times; Louis Scherer, president of the Long Island Free Advertising Agency; W. Fletcher Taubman, publisher of the Reading Chronicle; and George A. Russell, treasurer of the Chambers and Russell Advertising Agency.

Dr. Glendon J. Archer, co-president, First National School, Miss Carolella A. Bryant as secretary, Miss R. Esther Adams, librarian, Mr. Marion A. McDonald, in charge of the book store, and Paul A. MacFarland, director of the placement bureau, are the executive officers.

Courses listed in the three-year curriculum are: principles of advertising, history and principles of journalism, newspaper administration, advertising production, news writing, managers of production, newspaper advertising, in putting the news, circulation, circulation doing, copy editing, newspaper promotion, advertising salesmanship, editorial department, law of the press, advanced advertising problems, editorial direction, and advanced organization problems.

The five-year course includes all the above journalism courses, but offers in addition 12 semester hours of academic work. Among the academic courses listed are the following: history of civilization, English composition and literature, creative writing, survey of American literature, national government and political parties, elements of statistics, and current social problems. Hubert F. Valente, A.M., of New York City, will direct the course in radio broadcasting to be offered in the five-year curriculum.

In announcing the foundation of the College of Journalism recently, President Archer outlined its purpose as being two-fold.

First, to provide opportunity for men and women, already engaged in the profession, allied to journalism in following instruction to qualify for advancement in their chosen field.

Second, to create a College of Journalism in which persons of literary inclination, or those who may aspire to employment in newspapers, magazines, advertising or publishing fields, may obtain the highest type of technical education under instruction by eminent practitioners in the journalistic field, and who, at the same time, may acquire the necessary practical experience to qualify them for positions in the industry.

Educational observers have been quick to note that the policy of the College is rather unique in that both the practical and theoretical aspects of the newspaper worker's career are to be provided for. Many students will be regularly employed on newspaper staffs. For these who are not so employed, the College papers offer practical experience. This will be supplemented by opportunities for the student for actual contact with busy modern newspapers and publishing houses. The placement bureau will do all in its power to find employment in the industry for those desiring it. The Massachusetts Press Association, in which its membership has a large number of daily and weekly journals throughout the Commonwealth, is an operating link with the College of Journalism, in every way possible.

The academy courses will be given by instructors of the Suffolk College of Lib-

Other faculty appointments include the following:

William Abbott, librarian, Boston Globe; Walter D. Allen, publisher, Brookline Chronicle; George Brinton Brad, motion picture editor, Boston Sunday Post; Harold Bennett, Boston Traveler staff reporter; Frances Blanchard, editor women's club news, Boston Traveler; Winfield S. Brooks, Boston American staff writer; Gardner E. Campbell, managing editor, Wakefield Daily Item; Agnes Carr, domestic problems, Boston Traveler; Joe Mitchell Chaplin, author, editor, and publisher, Howell Cushman, radio news commentator, Boston Herald.

"Bill" Cunningham, sports writer, Boston Post; Robert H. Denver, Jr., instructor in journalism; Winfield Scott Hooper, editor, "American"; Loren E. Hooper, publisher, Beverly Evening Times; Elmer Hughes, dramatic critic, Boston Herald; James Ernest King, editorial writer, Boston Traveler; Louis Lefebvre, feature writer, Boston Globe; Margaret Mills, editor of household page, Boston Traveler.

Henry Minott, New England manager, United Press; Harland Radcliffe, city

Journal Staff To Be Organized

Opportunity Open To All

Immediately following the organization of classes next week bulletins will be posted in the corridors of both the college and the Law School concerning the organization of the staff of the Journal. Although no definite arrangements have as yet been made, it has been suggested that a temporary staff work on the next few issues of the publication under the direction of the faculty adviser and that at mid-years a staff election be held, the various positions to be held until February, 1937.

While the publication, as would naturally be expected, is to be sponsored by the College of Journalism as part of its regular work, the invitation is extended to students of the College of Liberal Arts and students of the Law School to interest themselves actively in the actual publishing of the paper. The experience gained by the individual will mean a big step forward for him. The paper, on the other hand, will depend largely upon the wealth of news and tradition which the Law School has.

eral Arts and the high standards of the Liberal Arts courses will be maintained in the College of Journalism.

Dean Paul A. Newsome is executive secretary of the Massachusetts Press Association and holds a degree from Harvard College. His newspaper experience includes reportorial and feature work on the Long Island Times Herald and the editorship of the Verona (N. J.) News and the Weymouth (Mass.) Gazette.

In addition to his manifold duties as Dean of the College of Journalism, Dean Newsome will have charge of all detail connected with the Editorial Department.

Augustine H. Sullivan of Brockton, Mass., has entered upon his duties as head of the Administration Department. Mr. Sullivan has had many years of valuable experience in journalism, particularly in the promotional, advertising, and circulation branches.

Adolph F. Johnson of 119 William Street, West Medford, has been named head of the Department of Advertising.

Mr. Johnson was formerly secretary of the Vocational Board of Boston University and for several years was a special feature writer. He also holds a B.S. degree from that institution. A former teacher, Mr. Johnson has had many years of advertising and magazine making up experience.

At present he is advertising manager for the New England Division of the A. & P. food store.

editor, Boston Transcript; George W. Slade, feature writer, Cheshire Evening Record; Edson Smith, financial editor, Boston Herald; Loren H. Thayer, radio editor, Boston Globe; Pauline Warren, society editor, Boston Herald; Robert M. Washburn, editor, Washburn's Weekly Column.

Additional Rooms Provided

Some important changes have been made in the Law School building during the summer. Because of the necessity of providing additional classrooms for the use of the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Journalism, it has been found necessary to erect partitions in two halls in the Annex. The former Senior and Sophomore hall, later separated into two halls with, by sound proof partitions erected through the central arches. The new hall, each having accommodations for 175 students. The new quarters are considerably improved by the change. The freshmen will continue to meet in the fourth floor at the Annex. Sophomores will be assigned to the first floor. The Junior and Senior classes will meet in the new hall in the second floor. The third floor will be assigned to the College. Some changes have been made in the main building. The former Study Hall has been made into a lecture hall for the use of the College. Hall C is to continue to be used for Liberal Arts classes.

Suffolk Secretary's Devoted Service

Miss Catharine C. Caraher's
Devoted Service

Miss Catharine C. Caraher came to Suffolk Law School in January, 1919. To the Dean, who had been having the usual trouble with inexperienced secretaries, she was the answer to the prayer of a harassed man. She immediately took hold, relieving the Dean of many of the small intricate details. As she demonstrated capacity, the Dean gradually entrusted more and more of the detail work to her. In the school building trials of 1920 her faith and courage and loyalty to the Dean were unfading even in the darkest hour.

Miss Caraher has risen to the position of Assistant Treasurer. As increasing burdens in public affairs gravitated to the Dean, more and more of the administrative work of his office was delegated to Miss Caraher and her discharge of these duties has measurably freed him for the outstanding service to State and Nation that he has been performing for many years. When the founding of the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Journalism drew heavily upon the Dean's time, Miss Caraher responded without stint to still further increase of burdens in the law school's administration. Her motto has always been "Suffolk, first, last, and always."

The First of the Masters

By JAMES G. MORRIS, LL. M.

Once again we're gathered here
Among our memories, old and dear.
To hold our celebration,
In memory we re-gather, once more,
To those delight(ful) days of yore,
And find the same situation.

Things are different now from then,
We're older and much wiser men,
Than when we sat here last.
Some are hild and some are gray,
For while we've plodded on our way,
The years have passed.

Perhaps, when we passed through that door,
Like hundreds who had gone before,
We thought we knew it all;
But through the years that intervened,
From such a thought we've all been weaned.
Pride goes before a fall.

We all realized how mighty few
Were the ones we really knew,
And grasped the opportunity
Our meager knowledge to enhance
In the school that gave a chance
To all in the community.

And so, again, we started in
To work and study and to win
A coveted degree;
One to which we all aspire,
One that's quite a good deal higher
Than our LL. B.

So we learned of salvage, wreck and tonnage,
Of boats, jetons and of storage;
Should a wreck come to grief,
And while Mr. Getchell grew quite hoarse,
We listened to a wondrous course
On how to write a brief.

Taxation took back our attention;
But I must not forget to mention
Our search throughout the law,
Then we listened filled with admiration,
To just how much and every nation
Should act in time of war.

Each humble town, each spacious city,
Each government it was a pity
The way we criticized,
And when the Judge heard us debate
News, news and high tax rate,
He simply looked surprised.

We learned of all the faults and ills
In the manner Boston paid her bills
In days of yore,
And how, today, things are much better,
For she must live up to the letter
Of chapter forty-four.

We learned of Angles, Celts and Danes
Of Witan, Baron, Earl and Thane,
From Docteur Tadin's lips,
Until today, each day and date
In England's history, small or great,
Is at our finger tips.

Then came the great task, last of all
The one for which the Dean did fall
Our theses we must write.
We thought we made a bargain shrewd;
The day we did, we all have rued.
It was an awful plight.

Twenty papers? why that's no worry,
We'll run them all off in a hurry.
That's what we all thought
Now look at us, we're worn and thin,
From our long run to get them in,
A lesson we've been taught.

But, here we are, we've all succeeded,
We've gained the knowledge which we needed.

A fortune it is worth;
We wouldn't swap those happy hours
Amid the hardships that are ours
For all the gold on earth.

We're about to leave and go again
To face the world as better men,
And leave the school behind.
But, looking back over this past year
And thinking of our treatment here,
These thoughts come to my mind.

How thankful we should be to him
Whose strength and courage, zeal and vim.

How helped this school survive,
We wish him luck in fullest measure,
His friendship we will always treasure,
So long as we're alive.

And although these thoughts may sound too fine,
The wish is theirs, the words are mine—
I'm speaking for the class.

And we alone can prove them true
By the way we live and the things we do
When from this school we pass.

To the faculty and to the Dean
I say the words we truly mean,
And say them with a sigh.

We thank you each and every one
For everything that you have done,
God bless you — and goodbye.

Long Tenure of Professor Duffy

"Old Faithful"

Professor Thomas F. Duffy was graduated from Suffolk Law School in June, 1916. In September, 1917, he was appointed to the faculty as a teacher of Partnership. In his first year of teaching at the school he was given a leave of absence because they couldn't fight the World War without Tom's help. The night when he bade farewell to his class, the students manifested their appreciation of his services by a very practical demonstration of partnership—a wrist watch. After Professor Duffy had cleaned up the mess across the sea, he returned to his Alma Mater as a teacher of Law Office and Court Procedure and Partnership. In September, 1922, we find him promoted to the subject which he has taught continuously since that date—Bills and Notes. In recent years, he has taught Wills and Probate and Landlord and Tenant.

Professor Duffy is an outstanding example of loyalty to his Alma Mater and downright ability as a teacher of law. The thoroughness with which he prepares his lectures and the vim and energy that he displays in the classroom have endeared him to Suffolk men for nineteen years.

In these days of conventions and candidates, when everybody is arguing about Presidents and Platforms, it occurs to us that this might be a fine time to re-state our own A & P Platform. It's very simple.

A & P is in business to make it easy and pleasant for American housewives to get the best food obtainable at prices they can afford to pay.

It's the daily vote of millions of satisfied customers that's keeping us in office.

Our customers appreciate the dividends they get in good health from continued use of our excellent food.

Since good health is the greatest untaxable asset anyone can possess, our customers continue to cast their ballots in favor of A & P.

Librarian Appointed at C. L. A.

Miss Esther Newsome Enters Upon Duties

Miss Esther Newsome has been appointed Librarian at Suffolk College of Liberal Arts and has already entered upon her duties. She is busy cataloging the books now in the Library and is planning for the necessary additions in order that the college may be thoroughly equipped with reference works in all departments before classes resume in September. The new department, Suffolk College of Journalism, will also require library equipment and newspaper files all of which will be under the oversight of Miss Newsome. The library will occupy the second floor of the administration building at 59 Hanover Street. Miss Newsome is admirably equipped, having had charge of the Library and Reading Department of the Modern Map Company in Chicago for several years. She has recently made an intensive study of library methods in the Public Library system of East Orange, N. J.

One hundred hours of advertising, news writing and newspaper organization and management has been added to the Suffolk College of Journalism Library in the last three months. Material on typography, printing, advertising layout, selling, psychology and marketing, research and statistics are found in the advertising section, while books on news writing and editing, magazine article writing, publicity, propaganda, press ethics, censorship and law are listed in the editorial department. News-photo organization and management, photo-history, public opinion and many other subjects are also included in the new acquisitions.

About fifty newspapers have already been ordered for the library, and others will be added from time to time. Numerous periodicals of professional interest are also being added. The N. W. Aver directory of newspapers and periodicals, a recent acquisition, will be of great use to students.

The journalism library will be housed with the Liberal Arts library but separately classified. A stock room has been added, giving room for about thirty five hundred more books.

Mr. Edwin J. Donohue of Cambridge, a member of the Class of 1911, Suffolk Law School, has been appointed student assistant in the Library at Suffolk College of Liberal Arts.

Mr. Donohue has had considerable experience in cataloging in the Wellesley Library at Harvard College. He will be on duty from 5:00 to 10:00 p.m. each school evening.

Placement Bureau in L. S.

Mr. Paul A. MacDonald Heads Work

Among the many progressive steps inaugurated at Suffolk during the last three years is the Placement Bureau. In the Fall of 1932, the Suffolk Law School Placement Bureau went into operation under the direction of Mr. Paul A. MacDonald. It is still in its infancy, but its worth has been felt already. A number of students have obtained permanent employment and a great many others have been given part time jobs through its efforts. The students' employment applications are filed systematically and a genuine attempt is made to find the best man for a particular job.

It is true that everyone who applies cannot receive employment. This is due partly to the general economic situation and partly to the fact that many applicants have little or no experience. It is not the fault of these young people that they reached working age during the height of the depression and have never had a chance to gain the experience so desired by employers.

The many Suffolk Alumni who will find this article capable of great interest to the Placement Bureau and of direct benefit to the present Suffolk students. Although you who are engaged in the practice of law may not find it possible to employ any of our students, read all know many business men who are looking for the right kind of ambitious young person. Suffolk Alumni need not be told that Suffolk students are ambitious. If they weren't they would not be seeking an education in the evening after a hard day's work. The Placement Bureau owes it to them that only those people who are capable of holding down a position are allowed to apply. Therefore, the many Alumni and friends of Suffolk may feel safe in recommending to their friends in the business world, that they phone Mr. MacDonald of the Placement Bureau and discuss their needs with him.

The primary purpose in establishing this service is to obtain employment for the students, but the first requisite is a satisfied employer. In this way, and in this way only, can the Suffolk Law School Placement Bureau become not only a service to the students, but a service to the community.

Communication

To our Readers

The Journal is interested in receiving communications from you. Let us assume that letters to editors will fall into two distinct categories: letters on topics of current interest and letters of criticism. We need both kinds.

We leave it to our correspondents to exercise due discretion as to content and style. Lengthy messages would present problems to us should we wish to print them. Controversial subjects of the gutter type are not desirable, either. As for letters of criticism directed at the Journal itself, there will be either destructive or constructive or a blending of both. Naturally, the editors are anxious to please their reading public. Criticism is another name for an expression of judgment. The editors will try to be big enough not to discard unfavorable judgments on the grounds that such are merely destructive criticisms.

Constructive criticism is particularly sought. Every department of the Journal's activities should offer material for it. If we can improve the paper, and if we can, let us do it. There are many admirably published magazines, journals in the United States today. Each had its small beginnings. Each is the product of progress. Constructive criticism over a period of years has been a necessary constituent of that progress.

Here at Suffolk, the editorial staff will hold a special meeting after every issue. This meeting will be held for the purpose of discussing the merits and defects of the last issue. Readers' communications of a critical nature will be considered by the group. These meetings are expected to contribute to the advancement of practical journalism among us.

The Suffolk Journal must be a reflection of the age in which we live. It is a dynamic age, one of progress in spite of difficulties. To those of our fellow students who have had experience on staffs of other college publications, to the practical newspapermen, to the faculty and to the student body, we extend the college of Journalism, the editors address a standing invitation. Tell us whether we fail and how we may improve. Address us as our name appears in the masthead on the editorial page, send your name and remember to give your school and class.

P. R. Jordan, '12, Awarded LL.M.

Veteran Attorney Diligent Student

Peter R. Jordan of Medford, who received his Master of Laws degree from Suffolk Law School at the recent commencement, enjoys the distinction of representing a class that was graduated from the institution twenty-four years ago.

Mr. Jordan first enrolled in Suffolk Law School in 1908 when the school was only two years old, attending lectures at night in the old Suffolk Savings Bank Building at 55 Tremont Street. The school moved to Tremont Temple in March, 1909 and here it was that Mr. Jordan completed his undergraduate course, receiving his diploma in 1912. The school did not at that time confer law degrees. In 1914, however, Mr. Jordan was awarded the coveted LL. B. degree from his Alma Mater.

A member of the bar in Maine and Massachusetts, Mr. Jordan has been active in the Suffolk Law Alumni Association. When the graduate school was inaugurated last year, Mr. Jordan was one of the first graduates to enroll. Percival Dodge Jordan was born in Lewiston, Maine, April 13, 1876. He attended Lincoln (Mass.) High School. He has been a member of the Massachusetts bar for twenty-two years.

In Memoriam

GEORGE A. FROST
Trustee of Suffolk Law School

In the death of George A. Frost, July 17, 1936, Suffolk Law School lost more than a Trustee. It lost its quiet saint. In the days when the founder of Suffolk Law School was a college student, Mr. Frost proved himself a good companion to the friendless youth. The meeting of the two was in itself providential for they met on a stage coach in August 1862 when young Archer was on his way to the Barnstable railroad station en route to a hospital.

Mr. Frost was then a spin in middle life, Vice President of the George Frost Company that manufactured the Boston Gravel. The adverse misfortune of a college student, obliged to earn his own way and painfully crippled with a fractured knee, attracted the attention of the kind-hearted traveler. The result of the meeting was that Mr. Frost sent the youth to the Newton Hospital of which he was a trustee, furnished a skillful surgeon and all medical care needed for the treatment of the injured knee. During the months of convalescence, Dean Archer was able to attend college and law school because Mr. Frost insisted upon bearing his money for his tuition and living expenses. In fact for three years Mr. Frost continued to finance young Archer's education, bearing the entire cost of twenty-two hundred dollars.

Upon admission to the Massachusetts bar, the young attorney wrote his benefactor to make arrangements to repay the loan. There it was that he learned the true nature of the man, for Mr. Frost assured young Archer that he was well pleased with the investment and that the only way that Archer could repay it would be to assist other young men.

In founding Suffolk Law School, Dean Archer had constantly in mind the example of Mr. Frost's philanthropy. Moreover, Mr. Frost stood by in the critical years of the school. More than once he made loans to the Dean to keep the school running. After the charter was granted, he became a trustee and continued in that capacity to the date of his death. Mr. Frost's last active service on the Board of Trustees was on the Building Committee in 1926-27. For the past few years ill health kept him from attending trustee meetings. The memory of George A. Frost will remain an inspiration to Suffolk men of all generations.

Alumni Anglers Enjoy Big Day

Sacred Cod Caught?

On June 28, 1936, the Alumni Association enjoyed a real old-fashioned fishing party in the outer harbor, beyond Boston Light.

All arrangements for this enjoyable trip were left to the chairman of the Committee, that well known and capable old sea dog and former secretary of the Association, "Ed" Sharkey, whose knowledge of the requisites and whose selection of a fine seaworthy craft left nothing to be desired.

The crowd gathered at the dock of the Jeffrey Point Yacht Club, East Boston, at 9:30 A. M. and, after loading the provisions, etc., into the cabin, got under way for the fishing grounds. The boat itself was admirably adapted to its needs, a forty-foot cabin cruiser which afforded ample room for all hands.

The weather was perfect and the trip down the harbor was very pleasant. All hands joined in singing old favorites under the guidance and direction of their genial and popular performer and singing master "Tom" Finnegan, who was the soul of music and the life of the party all day.

We finally arrived at a spot far down the harbor where the skipper thought success might smile upon us. It was here we cast the anchor overboard, and, after partaking of lunch, prepared our lines and settled down to the business of enjoying that fine old sport made famous by Isaac Walton. It was a business, too, as each member of the party contributed to the pool which was to go to the one catching the largest cod fish.

We hadn't been fishing long when a fine cod tried to get chemistry with his bait in George McGinnle's hook that found the affable Assistant Instruct Attorney to accept with the line and as wound up in the boat. This cod, which is the largest cod of the season, will be a fine sporting time when "Jim" Harrington bailes in another cod that must have been its twin and the prize money was divided between these two champion anglers.

About four o'clock we hoisted anchor and started back for the dock. On the homeward trip the sky was overcast and a small squall blew up. The craft cut through the heavy sea throwing a spray up over the bow and giving some of the boys a new experience, but never once did our staunch craft veer from her course.

All hands were set safely upon the dock, and, before departing in their several ways, were unanimous in declaring that it had been one fine day on the briny deep.

Among those present on the trip were our president, "Bruno" Particelli; "Ed" Sharkey, the committee chairman; "Jim" and "Bill" Bagley; "Tom" Finnegan, George McGinnle, "Jack" Toban, Major McDonough, "Archie" Gillis, "Jim" Lally, Ray Papalia, "Jim" Harrington, "Joe" Twitchell and others.

All hands expressed the hope that a similar fishing party be arranged by the Association each year.

Master of Laws Course

DEAR ALUMNES

SEPTEMBER 28, 1936.

Suffolk Law School's Master of Laws course leading to the degree of LL. M. offers advanced study of practical character. Graduates of ripe experience at the bar, in public office and in academic work have taken this course and pronounced it soundly helpful in their daily professional pursuits as well as in the broadening of their educational horizons. Such is the judgment of our Masters of Law in the Class of 1936 which included prominent lawyers, officers of business, political and labor organizations, officers of the Commonwealth and members of the Faculty of Suffolk Law School.

In our faculty of Masters of Law there is room for you. Your growing experience and ripening understanding should be a valued contribution to the discussions in our Masters' classroom.

May we welcome you and know mutually helpful associations?

Sincerely,

TRUSTEES OF SUFFOLK LAW SCHOOL,
THOMAS J. BOYNTON, President
GLENNY L. ARCHER, Treasurer
JAMES M. SMITH, Vice President
HIRSH J. ARCHER, Secretary
